FOREWORD

I began the compiling of this history or genealogy of the three families, Allen, Begley and May in 1940, after the death of my wife, which occurred in 1939. I intended to do only the Allen family, but after reading Milard Allen's history of the Allen family I was inspired to do the Begley family. I wrote to a genealogist in Washington, D. C., and she suggested we take up two or three families, so I included the Mays.

I have spent much money and valuable time with the hope I would get something that would be of interest to my people and would be of value to the rising generation.

In compiling this book I received help from Tress May Frances on the May family and Grace Webb on the Allen family. The data on the Begley family I gathered myself. I had to travel over rough roads and many miles over mountains where there were no roads, only bridle or foot paths. It was difficult to get information by writing.

After getting my data I would have to write and rewrite to get it in shape so it could be understood. I know there will be mistakes but I hope my people will realize how hard it has been for me to compile this book. There is a lot of work I could still do on this history but it would take a long time and at my age it would be best for me to rest for the rest of my life. So I dedicate what I have accomplished to the public.

JACKSON A. BEGLEY.

The origin of the Allens is lost in the impenetrable mist of unrecorded ages. The name is very ancient, and is supposed by some to be of Saxon origin and to have been originally written, "Alwyn," signifying "beloved by all." It is a common name in England, frequently appearing in history and almost invariably spelled Allen. John, William, Thomas, Edward, George and Alexander seem to be favorite christian names, for the early Allens were Christians, and many of them eminently religious, and most were non-conformists. In later times William Allen of Walingham, England was among the first of the Puritans martyred in 1555. Rev. John Allen, an English Puritan, left his home in 1596 and settled in Massachusetts in 1639. Rev. Thomas Allen refused to conform and was silenced in the English Church and fled to Massachusetts at the same time. Cromwell speaks in high terms of his General Allen as a most reliable and earnest religious man, and in the records of persecuted Puritans, there are many Allens among them. Many of our English Allen cousins were men of much executive ability. As early as 1413 under the reign of King Henry V we find Thomas Allen was High Sheriff of London, and all the way along the succeeding ages the High Sheriff of London, Lord, Mayor, and other important officers were often filled by Allens. We need not feel ashamed of our ancestral name.

While the origin of the name Alling—which is, perhaps, even more ancient than Allen, cannot be demonstrated, it seems probable that it came from the Aethelings or Athelings, contracted Allings, a dark, brunette race of the Angels, who came with the Saxons from Germany to Britain in the sixth century. They drove the Scots out and took possession of the country, giving it the name Angleland (England), and by their intermixture we have the Anglo-Saxon race. Alling is the name of a very ancient town in Denmark, which indicates the origin of the name as German or Danish, while the ancient places Allington, Allingham, and Allingford in England render it probable that at one time this was not an uncommon name there, but it seems to have almost, if not entirely, disappeared in later times, while Allen has superceded it. Burkes Encyclopedia of History gives forty different crests for "Allen," four for "Allyn," and one for "Allyn," but none for "Alling," indicating its rarity in comparatively modern times. The word "Aetheling" means a person of Royal blood, and the Athelings or Allings were hereditary aristocracy, a thoroughbred brunette race, unlike the other Angles and Saxons, who were "a light-haired, fair complexion people." These Allings were located in the north of England and were converted to Christianity by the Culdee Missionaries, while the other Angles and Saxons in the south and west were still heathen barbarians. This opened the way for the great success of St. Austine and his band of Romans who came to England in the latter part of the sixth century. The Allings were the first of the Anglo-Saxon converts, so the Allings and the Allens were among the leading Christians of England in early as well as modern times.

It is said that Rogers and many of his early descendants were of quite dark complexion, evidence of it still appearing in some branches of his offering, and that it is not improbable that he descended from the Athelings and his father with their children, changed the form to Alling, perhaps to restore the ancient name and perpetuate the identity of their line. There is a tradition that they changed the spelling to distinguish themselves from the Milford Allens, founded by Henry and Gideon Allen, who are credited with being loyal to the English Church, while the New Hoven Allings were uncompromisingly hostile and might have decided to avoid a new form name. Hence, the change to Alling.

Pages 3 and 4 the Author has borrowed from the book written by George P. Allen on the New Hoven Allens, New Haven, Connecticut, in order to show where the Allens originally came from. It is the best history to be found.

In starting the history of the Allens of Kentucky the Author has tried to get a backing. In other words, the Author has tried to trace as far back as possible to connect the present generation with the ancient.

We have heretofore had a story of the Kentucky Allens by word of mouth from some of the old settlers, but no written record and only what the Author has learned by writing to genealogists and to the Daughters of the Revolution. We find that the Allens came from Connecticut to Virginia and after the Revolution many went to North Carolina, and from there to Kentucky and Tennessee. George Allen and two other Allens, it has been told, came to Kentucky about 1793, and it was believed these three were brothers; but the Daughters of the Revolution give this line of the Kentucky Allens: They say John Allen was born 1750 and was a second cousin of Ethan Allen, and married Janett (Jane) Colman, a daughter of Samuel and Sara Lyons Colman of Virginia. John and Samuel both were Revolution soldiers.

There is a record of a will made by John Allen in Orange County, North Carolina. In that will he names the following: His wife, Janett (Jane), daughters, Peggy (Margaret), Sally (single at that time), sons, Abraham Allen, George Allen, Samuel Allen, a Presbyterian minister; daughters, Elizabeth Allen, Jane Allen, Nancy Allen, Emily Allen, and a grand-son, John Allen. Executor, Samuel Allen, Abud Rugall. Signed: John Allen, January 24, 1812. Died October 20, 1812. Wit.: Ezekiel Currer, Alexander Rugall, John C. Rugall.

We will now begin the story with John Allen:

- 1A John Allen, b. 1750, d. 1812, m. Janett Coleman, daughter of Samuel and Sara (Lyons) Coleman, both of Virginia. John and Samuel were both Revolutionary Soldiers.
- 1B Peggy (Margaret) Allen, b. abt. 1771.
No record except above for this daughter of John and Janett Coleman Allen.
- 2B Sally Allen, b. abt. 1772. In John's will Margaret (Sally) was named as being single at that time, and we have no record if she was ever married.
- 3B Abraham Allen, b. abt. 1773. This man might have been one of the Allens that came with Bill and George to Kentucky in 1793, and went farther west. No record is left of him.
- 4B George Allen, b. abt. 1774, d. abt. 1850, m. Cynthia Patton.

ALLENS MENTIONED IN HISTORY AND THE PRESS

ETHAN ALLEN of Revolution fame, a second cousin of John Allen, the man who heads this story. Ethan was b. at Litchfield, Connecticut, 1-10-1737, Colonel of the Green Mountain Boys, capturing Ticonderoga in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress.

DAVID ALLEN, an eminent painter, known as the Scotch Hor-garth, b. in 1744. He studied art for 16 years in Rome, gaining a gold medal for historical composition in 1773. He began to paint portraits in 1786. He became the head of an academy of arts in Edinburgh.

EDWARD P. ALLEN was an American Clergyman, b. in Lowell, Maine in 1853.

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, an American poet, born in Maine, October 9, 1832.

JAMES LANE ALLEN, an American novelist, b. in Lexington, Kentucky, in 1849. His fame rests mainly upon his powerful and popular novels of manners and people in the bluegrass region and elsewhere, the best known being "Summer in Arcadia" (1896), "The Choir Invisible" (1897), "A Kentucky Cardinal" and "Aftermath." He died in New York in 1925.

JOEL ALLEN, an American mammalogist, b. in Springfield, Massachusetts, July 19, 1838.

HARVEY ALLEN, an American novelist and poet, b. in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1889.

THOMAS ALLEN, an American landscape and animal painter, b. at St. Louis, Missouri, October 19, 1849.

WILLIAM ALLEN, an American preacher and miscellaneous writer, b. in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, January 2, 1784, d. at Northampton, Massachusetts, July 16, 1868.

WILLIAM HENRY ALLEN, an American Naval Officer, b. in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1784. He entered the Navy in 1800 and was in some of the greatest naval battles in American history. For bravery displayed on the Chesapeake and United States, he was made commander of the Brig. "Argus" in June, 1813. Having taken the American Minister to France, he went to the Irish channel where he did great damage to English commerce, capturing in a month 27 ships, one of which had a cargo worth $500,000.00. In a few days the "Argus" was taken by the English brig "Pelican." In the battle Allen was shot and died soon after (1813) and was buried with military honors in Plymouth, England.

WILLIAM ALLEN, an American educator, b. March 27, 1808.

WILLIAM VINCENT ALLEN, an American politician leader in the Peoples Populist Party. He became Senator from Nebraska in 1893. At the memorable Special Session of 1893, he took a prominent part in opposing the repeal of the Silver Purchase Act, holding the floor of the Senate on one occasion for 15 consecutive hours.

GENERAL R. ALLEN, one of the pallbearers at the funeral of the beloved General George S. Patton, who was buried in the Grand Duchy of Suiemburg beside the fallen soldiers of 3rd Army.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME MAY.

The name May is of English origin and was taken from the month of May. Some geneologists say it is taken from the old Scotch word March or Mag-Mes in old English, which means son-in-law or son in general.

Some authorities say it is French and say they came to England at the time of the Norman Conquest in 1066, or shortly thereafter. They say the name did not occur in England until the 14th Century. However, the name is purely English, and we find only English names, such as Elizabeth, Mary, John, William, Thomas, James, etc., and this proof is enough that it is not German descent as some say.

The following is a history of Mays, which are forerunners of that branch which was headed by Reuben and Sally May Allen. Reuben was a son of John and Sara Phillips May, born in what is now Pike County, Kentucky, in 1800.

It is related that Reuben came to Beaver Creek in Floyd County, Kentucky, as a carpenter, or builder of houses and built a house for old George Allen. While performing this job he became acquainted and fell in love with George's daughter, Sally, and married her.

Here is where the Mays of Beaver Creek originated and they are recorded below:

- 1A John May, b. abt. 1760, served in the Revolution from 1777 to 1779. He enlisted in Berkley County, Virginia, now West Virginia, at Martinsburg. He married Sarah Phillips in 1780, a daughter of John or Thomas Phillips. They were married in Berkley County. She was born about 1759

EARLY PATTONS — ANCESTORS OF VIRGINIA

Montgomery County founded 1777.

Henry Patton, appointed mayor of Malitia February 6, 1787, became Captain 1779.

Henry Patton became Gent of the Court. 1782.

May 3, 1789, Henry D. Patton, a member of the jury in the suit of Patrick Henry, Esq., against Jacob Kelling upon issue joined for 500 pounds and cost for damages by reason of trespass of defendant. Jury found for plaintiff.

Henry Patton became Mayor of the 1st Batallion September, 1793.

Thomas Patton, juror for Fincastle County, May, 1774, Captain of the Militia.

1800, July, Thomas Patton sold land to Henry Patton 325 by New River to Chrisper Trinkle, 200 acres; to George Holmes, 200 acres, all by New River.

July 9, 1799, William Williamson appointed to survey the St. in town of Patonsburg in Bolecourt County.

James Patton, 1774, March 2nd, William Thompson and William Preston, executors of James Patton, late of Augusta, Virginia.

It seems that James Patton deceased before organization of Bolelaunt County, 1769, from Augusta County, and was very wealthy, and it would take several pages to name the tracts of land located on different creeks and rivers in different counties which appears in the deed records as sold by his executors, who were many years in the full settlement of his large estate. His history, and most probably his will are in the records of Augusta County. All the counties I have mentioned were once Augusta County, which extended from the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia to the Ohio River, and very likely included the State of Kentucky. The history of Augusta County has been published in three large volumes, but I have never seen them and can not recall the Author's name at present.

HISTORY OF THE BEGLEYS

The people are named variously Bagley, Begley, Begly. It is hard to find where the name first originated, but as far as the author can find out, everything points to Ireland. Begley is Irish, and the name Begley appears to be very ancient in Ireland, and it is found that they have belonged to the Presbyterian and Catholic Churches, although one authority claimed the Begleys were not of Irish descent because they are not Catholic, and he claimed they were English.

Here are some records the author has picked up through a genealogist in Ireland from old indexes.

Cork marriages:

- Begley, Dortha and Joseph Massey, 175
- Begley, Louisa Isabella and Charles Amstrend, 1044
- Begley and Catherine Mckeag, 1040

Cloyne marriages:

- Begley, Joanna and Thomas Adkins, 1703
- Begley, Mary Ann and James Gordon, 1714

Cork wills:

- Begley, William Morris of Clonkity, 1831
- Begley, Elizabeth of Clonkity, 1018
- Begley, John of Cork, 1010
- Begley, Thomas, 1195

D.U.B. in marriages:

- Margaret and Richard Thorp, 1181
- Begley, Richard and Breen, 1782
- Begley, Dortha and Robe Clemson, 1003
- Begley, Valentine and Elizabeth Ransford, 1719

For the Public Records office, North Ireland:

The Armagh Manor Court Rolls 1625-1627 contain the Court Leet Rolls of Armagh and other manors. All the Begleys mentioned are found in those of Manor of Armagh.

John Begley Clanall is fined 1/6d for non-attendance as a tenant.

Nelanus O. Begley appears as a defendant and again as a plaintiff for assault.

John O. Begley is fined 3/4 for assault; no address stated.

Edmond Begley appears as an under tenant of lands of Lesleigh Co. Armagh in 1714 in rent roll of the See of Armagh. He is described as a Roman Catholic.

Presbyterian records, Belfast, Ireland:

22 April, 1711, Neless Begley has a child baptised Elizabeth. September, 1708, there was a purpose of marriage.

Marriage on the 6th September between John Begley and Elizabeth Wilson.

14 July, 1679, Simon Begley has son born to him who was afterwards baptised.

From Registry of Deeds, Dublin:

Deed dated 14 April, 1805, from James Begley to his son John Begley of Dromaduff parish of Bove Naugh Londonary and Ann McKing who is to marry Bd. John, half of farm at Domaduff at their marriage and the other half at the death of James, subject to payment of $11.16 to the brother of James John Begley, Junior. Witnesses: James O'Donnell and John Knox.

The foregoing record is given as proof that the Begleys are of Irish descent.

Here are some stories that have been picked up by correspondence as more proof of the Irish descent.

Here is a story from a living man named Hugh Begley, now living at 1706 Devitt Avenue, Alexandria, Virginia. He tells this story:

"My great grandfather, who lived in Kolran in the north of Ireland, was Hugh Begley, or Begly. He had sons. I don't know how many, but I believe some of them settled in the Southern part of the United States. I have never heard much about them. This same Hugh Begley had very strong objections to the courtship of my grandfather, Robert James Begley, and my grandmother, so he packed grandfather off on a ship bound for Montreal, Canada. However, grandfather managed to smuggle grandmother aboard the ship, and they were married by the captain. I have an old letter in my possession dated 1828. It was written to my grandfather in Montreal, Canada, by his cousin, Edward Begley, in Kolran, Ireland. This letter mentions estrangement between my grandfather and my great grandfather due to the above stated elopement.

Grandfather settled in Montreal, and I have record that he was Chairman of a committee for the building of St. Patrick's Cathedral in Montreal. He was also secretary of the Board of Public Works. This job seemed to have to do with the building of canals. He raised a good sized family. Of girls there were Mary, Sara, and Monica, and boys, Robert, James, John, Hugh, my father and his twin brother, Thomas, Joseph and Frank. The family moved to New York when my father was a boy. He was born in Montreal in 1838. During the Civil War the family lost track of Robert, James and John. They fought on the Confederate side and were probably lost in action. One of them (I don't know which), went down with the Alabama.

My Uncle Joseph I met in 1904, and he told me that he fought on the Federal side and had been at the fall of Richmond.

I was born in Brooklyn in 1886, and have one brother and one sister, both older than myself.

My Uncle Joseph left three children about my age. The oldest of them, Mary Edward, lives somewhere around Holis, Long Island. I don't know them very well.

My father practiced law in New York City for many years, and died in 1904.

I am an architect and hold a job as a Chief Draftsman in the Repairs and Utility Branch of the War Department in Washington. I took residence in Virginia in 1940, and like Virginia so well that I think I will stick. I have one daughter, Katherine, born in 1918.

I just remember that my father told me that the family had been banished from England on account of smuggling and piracy, but I assure you that I have never noted any of these tendencies in any of its members that I have come in contact with, and I imagine that in those days it was considered quite sportsmanlike. As far as I have ever been able to find out, my ancestors always spelled the name Begly.

Our Coat of Arms has a red lion rampant on top with a blue crescent between its paws. Below this is helmet, and below the helmet it is about like this:

I would like to tell you more, but as most of the old members of the family are dead now, it is not easy to get information. I would like to know more about my Uncle that fought in the Confederate Army, but I guess this is not possible. You did not say what part of Ireland your family came from. I would be interested to know. Hope you are in good health, and I will hear from you again.

Hugh Begley."

In the claim that the Begleys are English we have a story relating to how the Begleys were first introduced in American colonies, and the story runs like a fairy tale. It goes like this: Back before 1500, England had a law in their statute that made it a capital crime for stealing. In other words, if a person were convicted for stealing it was a death penalty by hanging. There was a family of Begleys that lived in a community in England where there was going to be a picnic, and everyone that was to attend was to cook and bring something to eat to this picnic. There were three Begley boys in a family that was highly respected by people in the community, although they were very poor. These boys, not having anything of their own to cook, stole a goose and cooked it to take to the picnic. The boys were arrested and brought before a court, tried, and convicted, but the neighbors thought it terrible for such fine boys to be hanged for stealing a goose, so they prevailed on the Court to banish the boys to the American Colonies, and that is how (so the story goes) the Begleys got established in America. The author does not vouch for the truth of this story.

In early times in North Carolina there were many families of Bagleys and many yet that spell the name Bagley. History tells us about a Worth Bagley who was the first American officer killed in the Spanish-American War, and his brother is a Naval Commander at present. There seem to have been many of that name Bagley, but more that changed the spelling to Begley. First we will begin on Bill Begley, born some time between 1770 and 1780, m. Winnie Sizemore, and is said to have been the daughter of a pure-blooded Cherokee Indian. Now is a good time to relate the story of the two white girls.

In the early years when Kentucky was being settled by immigrants from Virginia, North Carolina, and Tennessee, a crowd of immigrants from either North Carolina or Tennessee headed by a man named Cornett reached the Tennessee River one evening late. They decided to wait until morning to cross the river, so they made camp. They had all of their equipment, wives, and children, and cooked and ate their supper. While sitting around, not expecting any trouble, some Indians dashed into their camps and packed two white girls and took them off before the whites could retaliate but three of the white men saddled their mounts and went after them, following the trail until late in the night before they spied the light of the Indian campfire. The Indians had not expected the whites to follow them, so the three white men advanced as near the Indians' camp as they could without making any disturbance. They got near enough to see the little girls where they were sleeping, and decided to each make a dash and pick up a girl and get away. They did what they came for and got away without a fight, but when they got back to camp they discovered they had not only the two white girls, but they also had a little Indian girl. The next morning they crossed the river and had a discussion as to what they were going to do with the Indian girl. They decided that Cornett should take and raise her, and he did raise her to womanhood and she married a man by the name Sizemore. There is no doubt but that this is where many of the Begleys and many others get their Indian blood.

Bill Begley came to Kentucky somewhere around 1800 and settled about one mile up Cutshin Creek, and it appears he had taken all of the land around the mouth of Cutshin on the opposite side of the river up Bull Creek about one mile along the Middle Fork of the Kentucky River for some distance up and down the river.

If there is any truth in the saying "He is a self made man," it surely is applicable to Dennis Wooton. He worked out enough money to take him to Smith's Business College of the University of Kentucky. He came back after his college work and worked for a coal company in Perry County, where he made himself popular with the miners. He ran for County Attorney and in that office he conducted himself so well that now he is regarded one of the best men in Perry County. He was Assistant Attorney General in the administration of Governor Willis during miners. He ran for County Attorney and in that office he conducted himself so well that now he is regarded one of the best men in Perry County. He was Assistant Attorney General in the administration of Governor Willis during the years 1944-1947

This is the top limb of the Bill Begley tree

THERE IS A STORY in Kers History of Kentucky that W. E. Begley's great grandfather came from Ireland to Kentucky before Kentucky was a State; that he was the father of Henry Begley, and that Henry Begley lived his entire life in Perry County, Kentucky; but there is no proof of this great grandfather although there is conclusive proof that Henry Begley was a brother of Bill Begley, who came from North Carolina, and many others of the same family of Begleys that are found in the Southeastern counties of Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, and Western Virginia are all from the North Carolina stock that settled in North Carolina some time before the Revolution. Records show they were buying and selling farms as early as 1716.

Mr. J. A. Begley,
Hayward, California.

Dear Sir:

In answer to your letter received over a week ago, I wish to tell you that I was born in Berkeley in 1888. I am one of nine children. My father's name was Patrick Begley, now deceased. He died eight years ago at the good old age of 94. He was a native Aof the County Mayo, Ireland, and came to the U.S.A. when he was about 22 years of age. He was one of eight children. One brother also came to California and his name was Thaddeus Begley of San Francisco. He also passed away about 12 years ago. They were the only members of his family who came to the Western Coast.

I am a single man and reside with my sister, Miss nne Begley, at the Grant St. address.

Sincerely yours,

DANIEL JOHNSTON BEGLEY.

P. S.—I do not know anything about my grandparents, but am sure for generations back were natives of Old Ireland. My mother was a native of County Cork, Ireland.

Dear Mr. Begley:

Replying to your letter of April 21st, I am a native of North Carolina. My father, and for some generations, his immediate ancestors, were from Perquimans County of that State. Ensign Worth Bagley, the only U. S. Naval Officer killed in action in the Spanish-American War, was, as you surmise, my brother.

I am sorry to say that such records as I have of the Bagley family are stored away where I cannot get to them now or for some time to come. I seem to remember, however, that the name Thomas recurs in the records of the Perquimans branch of the family, which would appear to bear out your information in that respect.

With my regrets at not being able to give you further information, and with best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

D. W. BAGLEY,
Vice Admiral, U. S. Navy.
